18 May, 1430 Lately, on voidance of archdeaconry of Moray, to which a canony and prebend are annexed, by death outwith Roman Court of John de Fordes [sic], alleged possessor, Nicholas de Atholia, precentor of Dunkeld, D.Dec., accepted the same within legitimate time on strength of Expectative letters and processes, and obtained provision. But he doubts validity; and the archdeaconry is said to be void not by death of John but of Hugh de Dalmehoy, outwith Roman Court, although a certain William de Dunbar, who bears himself as clerk, St Andrews diocese, has detained it for about four months without canonical title. Therefore Nicholas supplicates that Pope would confirm forsaid acceptance and provision, and the consequences and would provide him by simple or new provision, as may seem best, to the said archdeaconry, a non-major dignity with cure (with annexes, £30 sterling), whether void by death of John or of Hugh, or because John, in peaceable possession for a year or more did not have himself promoted to priesthood, or void by free resignation of Adam de Narne or of William de Camera, formerly claiming right in said archdeaconry: notwithstanding that Nicholas holds precentorship of Dunkeld, a non-major dignity with cure, and perpetual vicarage of Stramigho, Dunkeld diocese (total, £40 sterling), and that lately he was provided to parish church prebendal of Federessou, St Andrews diocese (£30 sterling) which he does not possess. 22 June, 1430 Reformatio On 11 Kal. May, anno 13 [21 April, 1430], Pope granted provision to Robert de Crannach, M.A., B.Dec., brother of John, bishop of Brechin, ambassador of king of Scotland, of chancellorship of Dunblane, a major dignity with cure, with canonry and prebend and other annexes (£30 sterling), as is more fully contained in supplication thereanent. But in supplication it was omitted to make mention that Robert accepted archdeaconry of Moray by virtue of an Expectative Grace, and had himself provided but did not have corporal possession. May letters on supplication therefore be made out with statement as above. Concessum ut petitur. G.Cons. Rome, S. Apostoli, 10 Kal. July, anno 13.

21 June, 1430 Dispensatio Lately Pope dispensed Robert de Crannach, archdeacon of Moray, brother german of John, bishop of Brechin, ambassador of King of Scotland to Pope, that along with vicarage of Tibirnut, Dunkeld diocese, he might hold another incomaptible for life with power of exchange as often as he pleases. Then Robert accepted the archdeaconry of Moray, had himself provided and had possession. But lately Robert obtained a sentence in Apostolic Palace anent said vicarage, and has possession of it (£10 sterling), and of archdeaconry (£30 sterling). May Pope therefore dispense him to hold one other incompatible benefice during pleasure of Pope with power to exchange one of the three incompatibles for another benefice compatible with the other two, or, demitting the vicarage or archdeaconry, or not obtaining possession of them, to hold three other incompatibles during pleasure, retaining two for life, with power of exchange. 6 June, 1430 Formerly Robert de Crannoch, M.A., accepted archdeaconry of Moray void by death of John de Fordis by virtue of an Expectative Grace, but doubts validity. 18 May, 1430

Recently, namely on 11 Kal. May, anno 13 [21 April, 1430], Pope granted provision to Robert de Crannach, M.A., B.Dec., brother german of John, bishop of Brechin, ambassador of king of Scotland, of deanery of Dunblane, a major dignity with canonry and prebend and other annexes. But in supplication it was omitted to make mention that Robert accepted archdeaconry of Moray, a non-major dignity with canonry and prebend and other annexes, by virtue of an Expectative Grace and was provided and had possession but not corporal. May Pope give mandate to expedite letters with statement of acceptance, provision and possession of archdeaconry (£30 sterling), under first date.

Since a cause anent archdeaconry of Moray has been committed to a certain judge in the Roman Court between on the one hand Robert de Crannach, archdeacon of Moray, who recently by virtue of an Expectative Grace accepted said archdeaconry, void by death outwith Roman Court of John Forbes, and had himself provided, and on the other hand, William de Dunbar, alleged clerk, St Andrews diocese, and Nicholas de Atholia, alleged priest, Dunkeld diocese, and by some it is alleged that none of the said litigants has right in the same; therefore Robert, who is M.A., B.Dec., supplicates that Pope would give mandate to the said judge or to another by surrogation that, if he find that none of the litigants has right, he provide Robert to said archdeaconry, a non-major dignity with cure, with canonry, prebend and other annexes (£30 sterling), whether void as above, or by death of Hugh de Dalnahodo, formerly archdeacon, or by resignation or invalid exchange made by a certain William de Camera, or because John held the archdeaconry peaceably for a year or more without having himself promoted to priesthood, or by resignation or invalid exchange made by a certain Adam de Narne: notwithstanding that Robert is litigating in Apostolic Palace, anent vicarage of Tybirmore, Dunkeld diocese (£14 sterling), and has a grant of provision to deanery of Dunblane, a major dignity with cure (£24 sterling).

Provided to sub-deanery of Dunkeld on 8 December 1424 in place of William Croyser; but this provision was an error since Croyser was restored on 31 December 1426.

Part of his time at Rome was spent studying canon law since he was Bachelor in Decrees by 20 August 1425 when he was provided to the vicarage of Tibbermore. He had by now also had provision to a canonry of Moray. In April 1426 he was provided to a canonry of Aberdeen with the prebend of Oyne.

He was brother of John Crannoch.

Provided (fruitlessly) to Archdeaconry of Moray in the summer of 1430.

July 1430 he was provided to Deanery of Dunblane and he was certainly in possession by 15 May 1432 when he was again in Rome.

Lately, on voidance of archdeaconry of Moray, to which a canonry and prebend are annexed, by death outwith Roman Court of John de Fordes [sic], alleged possessor, Nicholas de Atholia, precentor of Dunkeld, D.Dec., accepted the same within legitimate time on strength of Expectative letters and processes, and obtained provision. But he doubts validity; and the archdeaconry is said to be void not by death of John but of Hugh de Dalmehoy, outwith Roman Court, although a certain William de Dunbar, who bears himself as clerk, St Andrews diocese, has detained it for about four months without canonical title. Therefore Nicholas supplicates that Pope would confirm forsaid acceptance and provision, and the consequences and would provide him by simple or new provision, as may seem best, to the said archdeaconry, a non-major dignity with cure (with annexes, £30 sterling), whether void by death of John or of Hugh, or because John, in peaceable possession for a year or more did not have himself promoted to priesthood, or void by free resignation of Adam de Narne or of William de Camera, formerly claiming right in said archdeaconry: notwithstanding that Nicholas holds precentorship of Dunkeld, a non-major dignity with cure, and perpetual vicarage of Stramigho, Dunkeld diocese (total, £40 sterling), and that lately he was provided to parish church prebendal of Federessou, St Andrews diocese (£30 sterling) which he does not possess.

In a suit pending in Apostolic Palace before dom. John Andree de Caldermis between William de Dunbar, clerk, St Andrews diocese, of noble race on both sides, and Robert de Crannoch and Nicholas de Atholia, alleged slerks, together and severally, anent archdeaconry of Moray, it is alleged by some that none of said litigants has right. William (who had himself collated by ordinary authority to said archdeaconry, void by death outwith Roman Court of John Forbes, peaceable possessor, and who is defendant and possessor), supplicates that Pope would give mandate to said auditor, that if he find that none of the litigants has right, he collate, assign and provide William to same, a non-major dignity, to which canonry and prebend are annexed (with annexes, £30 sterling), void as above or by death of Hugh de Dolmahow, or by resignation of John Forbes, Hugh de Dalmahow, Adam de Narne, or William de Camera, or void because said John, peaceably holding archdeaconry for a year and more, did not have himself promoted.
